

Family Makes The Best of Hairy Situation

Dad's treatments cause growth, daughters' practice removes it

BY BRADFORD PEARSON
Staff Writer

Up on the sixth floor of Building C in Medical City is a suite, unremarkable from the dozen other suites on the same floor.

The sign outside the door reads "David M. Feinstein, M.D." on one line, and "Enlighten" on another, the words not betraying what's really behind the door.

Now, it's nothing sinister. It's just ... unusual.

"It's kind of unusual to have two daughters working with their father," said Feinstein, an endocrinologist. "Kari has forced me to renovate the office, and soon, probably, my hair color."

STAFF PHOTO: CHRISTINA BARANY

Kari Feinstein opened a laser-hair-removal practice next door to her father's office, because his treatments cause unwanted hair.

The Kari he's talking about is Preston Club Estates resident Kari Feinstein, his daughter and the owner of Enlighten, a photofacial laser hair-removal practice located 10 feet away from David's endocrinology practice. The other daughter is Abby, who works at Enlighten. The two groups share not only a front door, but a receptionist, a waiting room, and the little sugar-free candies on the counter.

Eight years ago, Kari was an elementary school teacher, and David was scheming for ways for her to make a little more cash. He told her to look into what it would take to open a laser hair-removal

